FOR HELEN POTTS'S DEATH. CARLILE W. HARRIS ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE.

Charged With Potsoning Mis Girl Wife With a Morphine Pill-Young Women From the Comstock School Beserve Her Last Hours-The Mother's Testimony.

The trial of Carlyle W. Harris yesterday on the charge of murdering his girl wife began in earnest before Recorder Smyth in Part III. of General Sessions. The preliminary skirmish of three days was at an end, and the battle. which promises to be one of the most hard fought that has taken place in the criminal

Assistant District Attorney Wellman opened

the case for the people BA WILMAN OF ENSTITE CASE. He related at length the history of the prisoner's acquaintance and seret marriage with Helen Potts, and gave the circumstantial evidence upon which the jury will be asked to bring in a verdict of murder in the first degree. Mr. Wellman gave a short sketch first of Harris's career. He said that Harris had been a book agent, an actor, and finally, in the summer of 1889. he had just finished his first year at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He was then living with his mother at Their friendship ripened into intimacy and was followed by a secret marriage and by the girl's death, eighteen months after Harris had first met her. It was in January, 1890. Mr. Wellman said, that an engagement was first talked of, but Mrs. Potts wouldn't hear to it. On Feb. 8 the two young people stole off together and were married by Alderman Binekoff at the City Hall under the names of Charles Harris and Helen Neilson. Mrs. Potts noticed that Carlyle's attentions to her daughter were not so constant after this. Helen kept the fact of her marriage from her mother, and Miss May Scoffold, a friend of the family. was the first one to hear the secret, which was told to her by young Harris himself.

This was in the summer of 1800, when the Potts family were back in Ocean Grove. Mr. Wellman then related Helen's visit to her uncle at Scranton. Dr. Treverton, where her child was born, and her return to Ocean Grove in the fall in good health. Mrs. Potts learns meantime of the secret marriageand she demands an Davison of this city, where she finally obtained a copy of the marriage certificate, and an affidavit from Harris that they had been married under false names. Helen was sent to the Comstock school in November. 1860, at Harris's suggestion. On Jan. 15 folthe anniversary of the secret wedding, as the time for the Christian marriage. On Jan. 20 Harris, said Mr. Wellman, wrote a letter to Mrs. Potts, telling her that all her wishes would be compiled with if some other way could not be discovered. On the same day, Mr. Wellman said it would be proved, Harris had the pills of morphine and quinine compounded at Ewen McIntyre's drug store. Each of the six capsules was to contain 45 grains of quinine and one-sixth grain of morphine. Two days later he gave them to Miss Potts to take for her headache. She took three of them with no serious results, and on Saturday evening, Jan. 31, she took the fourth pill.

"She retired at 10 o'clock that night," continued Mr. Wellman, "and at 10% o'clock, when her roommates came in from the Symphony concert, she told them what beautiful dreams she had had. Soon afterward she said to them: 'Girls, I am numb all over, and I feelso queer.' The girls were frightened. Miss Day, the principal of theschool was aroused, and Dr. Fowler was sent for. Ho arrived at midnight, and then she Harris, said Mr. Wellman, wrote a letter to was in a cold perspiration, and she was breathing but twice a minute. Dr. Charles Bauer was summoned, and all through the night those physicians worked over the girl and tried to produce articleai respiration. A huntin the room resulted in the discovery of the box which had the capsules in it. Harris was summoned, and he told Lr. Fowler what his prescription had called for. Dr. Fowler responded that there must have been some terrible mistake, for the symptoms all indicated that the girl had taken an overdose of morphine. Harris was standing round while the doctors worked over the dring girl, wanting to know whether he could be held liable. At 10 or 12 o'clock in the morning Dr. Fowler saw that the end had come. Harris's first exclamation on hearing this was; "Great God, what will become of me then!" His first thought was of himself. He turned to Miss Day and told her that only the day before the dead girl had promised to become his wile.

"When Harris escorted Mrs. Potts up from the ferryto Miss Day's school he told her on the way that it was the druggist's awful mistake. She told him that the marriage must come out then and her daughter be ouried under her rightful name. Harris was in a fury at this and said it could not be. He finally gained life point, and Mrs. Potts refused to have an autopsy. for it would make necessary an explanation of the marriage. Mrs. Potts told the Coroner then that her daughter had been troubled with heart discass. She told that saidy to got a certificate of death from that cause, as she will tell make necessary an explanation of the marriage. lie it was who jegan the investigation which resulted in Harris's indictment, and not Mrs. Ports.

"From this testimony which I have outlined and still other that will be produced, the prosecution expects to prove that Harris's became tired of his wife and that he deliberately irrepared the poison for her; that he had the prescription put up in due form and kept out two of the poliest for his own protection. He kept them at home for thirty-six hours and we maintain that he unloaded one of them and blaced it in the fatal dose. The shrewd man does not che fatal dose. The shrewd man does not commit murder with a knife; but with a drug. He knew as a medical student just what the effects of an overdose of morphine would he. If the girls had not awakened her and checked that sleep of death, she would have passed off in a bour or two, and she would have been cold in death before anything was discovered. But his well-laid plans failed. A physician was called in who recognized the symptoms of morphine poisoning as failed. A physician was called in who recognized the symptoms of morphine poisoning as he my dying.

"We are going to show that Harris said to Miss Schoffold when he disclosed to her the fact of his secret marriage, that he wish-dead out of it. He had the murderous thought in his milad months before his young wife's death. On the morning of Jan. 20, when Harris had the prescription made up for Miss Potts, he had twenty-four capsules of sandawood prepared for himself. He insisted upon having the capture of his was use he said he would get the next to mee, and waited for them, although those for his own use he said he would get the next to see his wife until the next afternoon, so why should he have been anxious to get the capsules for her that day if he did not want to take them home, unload them, and load them up again? It was a very easy matter to throw the powder in one capsule and substitute.

a larger quantity of morphine. It would be an easy matter for him as a medical student to get the poison. He was very careful to save two of the capsules, and these did contain only one-sixth of a grain of morphine each, as the druggist should have put them up. We will prove that Harris told Dr. Hayden, one of the professors of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, that these two capsules would let him out. Did he not save these two capsules with the knowledge that they would be valuable to him? Dr. Fowler will tell you that Miss Potts was unquestionably suffering from morphine poisoning when he was called to attend her.

Potts was unquestionably suffering from morphine poisoning when he was called to attend her.

Another circumstance which will be brought to your attention is the fact that on Jan. 4. 9, and 10 Dr. Peabody of the College of Physicians and Surgeons lectured to his class, of which Harris was a member, upon morphine poisoning. He described how difficult it was to detect a case of poisoning from this causa. A jar of morphine was handed around the room, and each of the students had a chance to help himself to the contents. This was just ten days before young Harris made out the prescription for his wife.

"Two months after the girl was buried her body was disinterred, and an autopsy was performed by Drs. Allan McLane Hamilton and Rudolph Witthaus. The body was in an excellent state of preservation and every organ was found to be in perfect health. All the organs were removed to the laboratory of Dr. Witthaus, who is professor of chemistry in the medical department of the University of the City of New York. He made an extended examination of them, carefully scaling the doors and windows during his absence to make sure that they were not tampered with. He found morphine present and he teated some of this upon a live frog. That frog went through all the symptoms of norphine poisoning, precisely similar to those which Drs. Fowler and Bauer had noticed in the case of Miss Potts. The defence may try to tell you that Miss Potts committed suicide, but they cannot show the slightest motive. She was perfectly happy, and, besides, no trace of any medicine other than that empty pill box was found in the room after a thorough search."

but they cannot show the slightest motive. She was perfectly happy, and, besides, no trace of any medicine other than that empty pill box was found in the room after a thorough search."

All through Mr. Wellman's long speech young Harris hardly changed expression once. The opening made a strong impression upon the jurors and the spectators, who listened to it intently from beginning to end. The Recorder took a recess at the close of the speech until 2 o'clock. When court reconvened Miss Lydia Day, who is in charge of the speech until 2 o'clock. When court reconvened Miss Lydia Day, who is in charge of the speech until 2 o'clock. Miss Day said, on Dec. 2. 1850, and during the six weeks that she was there was frequently yisited by Carlyle W. Harris. The evening of Jan. 31 Miss Potts passed with the witness in her sitting room, and did not leave her until 10 o'clock. Then Miss Potts went to her own room, and two hours later Miss Day was summoned to her bedylet to find her unconscious. She sent for Dr. Fowler at once, and remained up all night with the dying girl. She found the empty pill box, and when Mr. Wellman handed up the little pink pasteboard box she recognized it at once. It was marked "Exhibit 1." The only conversation of moment that Miss Day remembered to have lad with Harris was on the day of Miss Potts's death. He told then that the dead girl had promised, on the day before, to marry him. She advised him then not to say anything about the engagement. John A. Taylor conducted the cross-examination, and his slow methodical way of putting his questions was in marked contrast to the way of his fellow counsellor. Travers Jerone. "Helen did not seem to be a very strong girl," said Miss Day in response to Mr. Taylor's questions, "and she complained of headaches several times."

"Was Mr. Harris received at the house often?" asked Mr. Taylor, and he edderly men got out t

"What was the sound like?" asked Mr. Wellman.
"Won't you make the sound. Mr. Wellman?" replied Miss Carson, "and I'll tell you whether it's right or not."
After one or two efforts, which brought the blushes to her face, Miss Carson produced a deep-drawn sigh, which, she said, sounded like Miss Potts's moans.
Miss Rachel M. Cookson, another of Miss Potts's roommates, who had come down from her home at Giens Falls to testify, stepped into the witness chair. Miss Potts was breathing as if she were choking, Miss Cookson testified, when she first heard her on the fatal night.

When the gas was lighted," said Miss Cook-

"When the gas was lighted," said Miss Cook-son, with an earnest little ned, "I saw that she was very, very white, and the veins stood out on her forchead." Miss Cookson gave a very realistic gasp to show how Miss Potts moaned. The searching cross-examination by Mr. Jerome did not disconcert Miss Cookson a bit, and she stepped from the stand as cool as a cuember.

The searching cross-examination by Mr. Jerome did not disconcert Miss Cookson as bit, and she stepped from the stand as cool as a cuenable.

Dr. Edward P. Fowler, the next witness, had begun to relate his connection with the case when Mr. Taylor threw a legal bombshell into the District Attorney's camp.

"I object." he said, "to the testimony of Dr. Fowler as inadmissiole. The dead girl's husband is the only person who has the right to grants waiver and allow this testimony to be entered. There is no question that Dr. Fowler attended Miss Potts as a regular physician, and he is not entitled to disclose what occurred or any facts and circumstances in connection with his professional duty to his patient. A special act was passed by the Legislature last year by which the nearest relative alone has the right to unseal the physician's mouth."

The importance of the point raised was appreciated at once by the fiscorder, who called upon the District Attorney for an answer. Mr. Wellman said that he was unpropared, as the point was one entirely new. Dr. Fowler was withdrawn from the witness stand until today, when Mr. Wellman will answer the objection raised. The case for the prosecution will be materially weakened it Dr. Fowler's testimony is not allowed. This will cut out all the testimony regarding the symptoms of morphine poisoning which Miss Potts showed to the eyes of the physician.

Mr. Wellman called Mrs. Cynthia S. Potts, the mother of the dead girl, to the stand. She was dressed in deep black, with a heavy black veil. The experience of the day had been a severe strain upon her, and it was evidently an effort for her to control herseil. By dint of hard questioning Mr. Wellman brought out bit by bit the story of her daugniter's acquaintance with Harris and their marriage, and her own subsequent afforts to get Harris to acknowledge the marriage. Concerning her call on Harris's lawyer, James E Davison, she said:

"Mr. Davison told me that Dr. Trevertor, had placed himself in his (Mr. Davison's) power by the operat

What did you say to this," asked Mr. Wellman.

"I told him that this—would—be—isgalized—prostitution. I said I wanted a ministerial marrisge. He said he would be willing at any other time, but when his name was connected with the club scandals at Ocean Grove he didn't think it was right. Finally one of Mr. Davisen's clerks brought me a copy of the marriage certificate from the City Hall, and then I asked Carl where the original was. He said he had burned it. I sat there looking at the two men in astonishment, for I couldn't say a word when I heard that." Mrs. Potts said that Harris signed an affidavit as she sat in the lawyor's office in which he declared that the assumed names were those of himself and hiss Potts. This affidavit was handed to Miss Potts.

Potts. "I said," continued Mrs Potts, "that there wasn't anything sacred in that marriage, and Carl replied: Bacred! I should say not. I have looked up the old fellow who married us and he keeps a lager beer saloon."

Mr. Wellman handed up the affidavit and the copy of the certificate for Mrs. Potts to identify. The examination of Mrs. Potts will be continued this morning.

Senators George and Walthall Re-elected JACESON, Miss., Jan. 19.—The Senatorial contest in Mississippi is ended, and Senators George and Walthall are returned by large majorities, the vote standing: George, 101; Barksdale, 53; Walthall, 135; Clarke Lewis, 21; Hooker, 4; Alcorn, 1. No intimation has come from Senator Walthall as to whether he will accept, but it is thought that he cannot refuse in face of such a complimentary vote, although he had announced that he was not a candidate.

Another Bear End Collision.

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 19.-Freight train 205 for Hartford ran into the rear end of local freight 201 at 9 o'clock last night. Nine cars were thrown from the track, and two were burned. The accident is supposed to have been caused by the flagman's failure to signal the rear train in season.

LOIS OF PROPLE TESTIFY TO HIS UN-Notwithstanding the mud and rain storm the wedding of Miss Rose Anthony Post, daughter of Mr. William Post, and Mr. Thomas Howard Howard yesterday afternoon filled the Church of the Heavenly Rest to the doors with the best-known people in New York society. The church, which is still arrayed in its Christmas dress of evergreen and holly, was erowded in all its parts long be-fore the bride and her attendants arrived, just at half past 3 o'clock. The decorations in the chancel were very simple, palms and forms being used almost entirely except on the altar, where there were two gold vases filled with Annunciation Illies. While the con gregation awaited the coming of the bride there was some excellent music by the organist, Mr. Henry Carter, and Mr. John Cheshire, lections, the intermezzo from Mascagni's Miss Post was led up the centre alsle by her father, and was met at the foot of the chancel steps by the bridegroom, who was attended by his brother, Mr. J. Neilson Howard of Newport, who served as best man. Miss Post's gown was of ivory-white satin, simply made. gown was of Ivory-white eatin, simply made, with long train, high neck and long sleeves, and trimmed with point applique lace. Her veil was of the same lace. It was fastened to the colffure with several very small pearl pins. She were a small bunch of white hyacinths on the front of the corsage, and the only bit of jewelry was a superb bow knot of diamonds, a present from Mr. Frederick W. Vanderbilt. She carried a white-bound prayer book instead of a bouquet.

The three bridesmaids, Miss Georgie Berryman, Miss Edith Cushing, and Miss Charlotte Winthrop, who walked before the bride, were arrayed in pretty gowns of white ladies' cloth trimmed with sable and feru emuroidery, large brown velvet hats, dressed with feathers to match. Each carried a muff of sable. The ushers were Mr. Woodbury Kane, Mr. Brockholst Cutting, Mr. Grant La Farge, Mr. Gordon Fellowes, Mr. J. Louis Webh, and Mr. Bronson Winthrop. They received from the bridegroom fleur-de-lis scarf pins which they wore in their white cravats.

The marriage ceremony was performed by the rector of the church, the Rev. Dr. L. Parker Morgan, after which a reception was held at the home of Mr. Post, 10 East Fifty-seventh street. The bridal glits were not displayed yesterday, but the friends of the young couple were permitted to view them on Saturday and Monday. They were many and gorgeous, including a huge silver and gold punch bowl from Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, a complete set of table silver from Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, aunt of the bride; a diamond ornament from Mrs. W. D. Sloane, a massive silver sauce bowl from Mrs. Post the grandmother of the bride, a handsome silver tea set.

AMUSEMENTS.

An Actors' Fond Entertainment.

There was no appeal for charity by the Actors' Fund, at the Broadway Theatre, ves. terday, but something like the sum of $2,000 was raised there for the fund's treasury by the simple and sonsible method of selling an entertainment that was more than worth the money, and which was provided by volunteers. Thus the real donors were the performers and Managers Frank W. Sanger and Daniel Frohman. The programme was carried out precisely as advertised, and the stage management by Walter C. Benows research, in rapid der in free assemblages of actors, in rapid der in free assemblages of actors, in rapid ment by Waiter C. Bellows resulted, for a wonder in free assemblages of actors, in rapid progress and no disarrangement. The contributions from current matter were an act of "The Lion Tamer," dancing by Amelia Glover, the Kendals in "The Happy Pair," a song and chorus from "The Last of the Hogans," Modjosks in a scene from "Marie stuart," Wills P. Sweatman and Luke Schooleraft in a dialogue, and the Frou-Frou dance from "Miss Helyott."

The new thing was "Catching a Fairy," a bit of a play from the French, performed by Georgia Cayvan and Herbert Kelcoy, the Lyceum favorites. It was dramatic gossamer of the lightest and most airy nature conceivable, and it was treated with rare delicacy, not only by the two actors, but by the Lyceum management as well. It was played in a daintily decorated room, where the furniture was golden, and everything was tastefully ornamented. The man was in evening dress, and the woman wore a ball costume that was as exquisite as the apartment. Miss Cayvan was the fairy, and Mr. Keleey was the catcher. The comedicate was all talk between a couple who met by chance, and became mated on the spot for life. "Catching a Fairy" would have been much worse than undhing if subjected to any crudity or coarseness in the rendition, but the two players committed no such outrage upon it, and it was the succassful novelty of the occasion. At the small and homelike Lyceum it would be still more effective. It deserves to get a chance there.

Killed His Wife.

PRORIA, Ill., Jan. 19 .- Four months ago Harry Johnson of Chicago and Lizira Laforce of this city were married in Chicago. Shortly afterward the husband became so abusive that his wife returned to her mother's home in this She was followed a week later by her city. She was followed a week later by her husband, who desired to renew their marital relations. This she declined to do. Johnson has been kept away from the Laforce home until this evening, when he came to the house and, during the mother's absence, shot his wife and then furned the pistol upon himself and completed the thoody work. Both are dead. It is supposed Johnson repeated his request for his wife to live with him, and did the shooting upon her refusal.

Killed at a Dance in an Italian Resort. Boston, Jan. 19.-When Fanny Kelly wished to return home from a dance which was in progress at the Italian resort known as 'Teemer's Yard." in the North End, last night, she went to the cloak room, in charge of Gane-rarco Balonordo, and asked for her wraps. Balonordo refused to give them up. Miss Kelly procured the assistance of her brother-in-law. Joseph Tananni, who attempted to take the things away from Balonordo. During the row which followed Balonordo shot and instantly killed Tananni. The murderer was arrested. IN FAVOR OF PASTOR DILL

Miss Leonard, the Hereine of the So-called Cooper Conspiracy, Stiences Presbytes Bebout Amid Burets of Laughter, There was a refreshing change in the nature of the proceedings yesterday afternoon when the trial of the Rev. A. C. Dill. accused of immoral behavior, was resumed before the Pres-bytery in Morristown. The testimony of the vitnesses was all in Parson Dill's favor, and not a little was accomplished toward counter-acting the many hard things said about his conduct on the previous days of the trial.

Much of the testimony was about the arrest of Mr. Cooper, the demented old man who took Ada Leonard into the church on a week-day night. The witnesses for the prosecution al-leged that Mr. Dili had advised Ada Leonard to go with Cooper and then had laid the trap or his arrest. Miss Lillie Cozine and Miss Georgie Cozine her sister, both testified that old Mr. Cooper had annoyed them constantly with his advances. He had written a letter asking Lillie Cozine to go to the chapel with him on a week-day night. The girls both denied that Mr. Dill had advised them to have anything to do with Mr. Cooper. They also testified that his conduct toward them had always been irreproachable.

Constable James A. Havey of Stirling testified that Dill had no connection whatever with Cooper's arrest. A number of the girls had complained to him about Mr. Cooper's behavior, and Lillie Cozine had shown him Mr. Cooper's letter.

ooper's letter. On the night in question, just after he had nished his suppers messenger came from Cooper's letter.

On the night in question, just after he had finished his supper's messenger came from Mrs. Leonard asking him to cometo her house. Mrs. Leonard said that Mr. Cooper had asked her daughter to go to the chapel with him that night and Mrs. Leonard thought that something ought to be done about Mr. Cooper. The constable advised Mrs. Leonard to let her daughter go with Mr. Cooper. The constable advised Mrs. Leonard to let her daughter go with Mr. Cooper. assuring her that he and Policeman Conkling of Morristown, who was then in Stirling, would be on hand at the chapel to protect her in case that should be necessary. After they arrested Mr. Cooper in the church they took him to the Morristown jail without seeing Mr. Dill, or receiving any word from him whatever.

Alfred Laessig testified that after Mr. Cooper's arrest he went to notify Mr. Dill, who was at a prayer meeting in Millington. He had received no previous instructions from the pastor. His motive was to get Mr. Dill at a prayor meeting in Millington. He had received no previous instructions from the pastor. His motive was to get Mr. Dill to go to Mr. Cooper's family and to Ada Leonard, who was considerably overcome, for the purpose of comforting them. When Mr. Dill reached Stirling, Mr. Cooper had already been taken to Morristown. The minister told Laessig that he would go to Mrs. Leonard's and to Mr. Cooper's family and do all he could to comfort them. He expressed his sorrow that the trouble had occurred, and he said he would do what he could to get Mr. Cooper out. ut. Ada Leonard, who went with Mr. Cooper to

And Leonard, who went with Mr. Cooper to the church, is a sweet-looking young girl, 17 years old, with dark hair. Elder Joel Bebout is the presbyter who gave testimony against Mr. Dill on the opening day of this trial. After Miss Leonard had testified yesterday about the Cooper incident, and said that Mr. Dill was not at all concerned in it, Elder Bebout said to her:

not at all concerned in it, Elder Bebout said to her:

"When you went with Mr. Cooper to the church that night. Miss Leonard, didn't you think you were doing wrong? Didn't you have any idea what Mr. Cooper's intentions were?"

"M. Mr. Bebout." the young girl replied.

"If you or Mr. Torrey at that time had asked me to go to church with you I would have gone without any heritation. But now if you asked me I'd be frightened out of my wits.

This was greeted with laughter, and Presbyter Bebout asked no more questions.

Mrs. Augustus Leonard, Miss Leonard's mother, corroborated her daughter's statement that Mr. Dill had no part is the so-called Cooper conspiracy. She said that if she had not been ill at the time Mr. Cooper would never have been arrested. She is a large, powerful woman, and she said she would have given him a piece of her mind. She said that Mr. Dill had never been guilty of the slightest breach of conduct as long as she had known him.

Did Mr. Dill ever pass the hight at your house?" The prosecuting counsel asked.
"Yes; he stayed one night at my house, but it was because the White Cap boys had taken the nuts off the wheels of his wagon and he couldn't get home."

Mr. Dill wore a spray of lilies of the valley in his buttonhole yesterday. He and his counsel appeared jubilant over the testimony brought out by the witnesses. The opinion seems to be gaining ground that the accused pastor will be acquitted, but with a reprimand.

TESTIMONY FOR MISS HASSELL Her Identification of McNulty Described by

His Superior Officers, Nearly half the Central Park police force stood in the corridor of the General Sessions building yesterday, waiting to be called as witnesses in the trial of their brother officer Andrew J. McNulty, upon the charge of criminally assaulting Marie Hassell, a young West Indian girl, in a cottage in the Park.

At the resumption of the trial Assistant District Attorney Townsend recalled Miss Hassell Lawyer Grant's cross-examination had made obscure in her testimony. Father Burke of the Church of St. Benedict the Moor, who has befriended Miss Hassell because she was rec-ommended to him by her pastor in the island of St. Martin, where she was born and edu-cated, sat within the bar throughout the day's proceedings.

of St. Martin, where she was born and educated, sat within the bar throughout the day's proceedings.

After Miss Hassell's testimony was ended Mr. Townsend called Sergeant Ferries of the Park police. He testified that McNulty's post included the cottage in which Miss Hassell says she was assaulted on the night of Nov. 21. Miss Hassell had testified that while she was in the cottage with McNulty, having entered it at his invitation, to warm herself before he showed her the way out of the Park in which she had lost her way, another Park policeman entered, and McNulty addressed him as "Tom." This policeman was smoking a cigar. He was very courteous to her, Miss Hassell had said, and gave her money to pay her car fare, as her pocketbook had been stolen, and went away. Sergennt Ferries said that Park Policeman Thomas O'Connor's post adjoined that of McNulty, and that, at the hour named by her, it was the duty of O'Conner to cross McNulty's post. Then Sergeant Ferries described the identification of McNulty by Miss Hassell. The men were paraded in sections and Miss Hassell asked Capt. Beatty to require the men to speak, as she wished to hear their voices. She said that her assailant was not in either of the platoons. Then the platoon to which McNulty belonged marched in. MeNulty's chin fell upon his breast, and he did not lift his head until Capt. Beatty ordered him to do so. Miss Hassell identified him as soon as she heard his voice.

Capt. Beatty gave similar testimony. The trial was adjourned for the dny.

Straw Board Companies Said to Have Comblued.

It was reported yesterday that a combination between the American Straw Board Company and the Independent Straw Board Company had been effected, and that the new price list wasfa substantial advance over the old. It was learned, however, that a combination between the American and Independent com-between the American and Independent companies had not been organized. The price of straw board before the organization of the American Company ranged from $60 to $70 at ton. In the first price list of that company the highest price quoted was $3250 per ton. The new list of the American Company shows an increase on the whole line of $5 to $12.50 per ton. While there has been no combination in fact, it is believed that an understanding has been arrived at by which all the outside mills have agreed to sell on the list of the American Company. The American Company has also withdrawn its rebate system. withdrawn its rebute system.

Togged Out in Discarded Opera Properties A quantity of scenery and theatrical supplies belonging to the Emma Juch opera company have been stored in Meyer's warehouse, a 207 East Ninety-ninth street, for two years The room they occupied seems to have been The room they occupied seems to have been more valuable than the properties, and last Saturday Meyer had the goods set out on the walk by a marshal. Since then the small boys in the neighborhood have been carrying off the goods a piece at a time. Yesterday Policeman Gallagher caught four boys togging themselves in the opera wares, and captured Robert kane. 13 years old, of 1.921 Second avenue. Kane had a foolscap and a blue domino. He raid he thought they had been thrown away by the owner, and Justice Kelly discharged him at the Harlem Court.

A Hollday of Gan. B. E. Lee's Hirthday. ATLANTA, Jan. 19.—Georgia was the first State to make the birthday of Robert E. Lee a legal holiday. To-day the anniversary was observed all over the State. In Atlanta there was a large public meeting to-night, which was addressed by Congressman O'Ferrall. Afterward there was a banquet by the Virginia Society in honor of O'Ferrall. Permanung, Va., Jan. 18.—The 85th birthday of Gen. Lee was generally observed to-day. The banks and stores were closed, and in many of the windows large photographs of Gen. Lee were displayed. Appropriate exercises were held in the public schools. State to make the birthday of Robert E. Lee a

SAW HER STAR LOMBARDO.

Strong Evidence Against Mrs. Cervo, Who ELIZABETH, Jan. 10.-In the trial of Mrs. Annie Cervo for the murder of Frank Lom-bardo to-day, Vinzinzo Sausa, a boarder in the same house where Lombardo and Mrs. Corvo lived, testified that he was aroused on the night of the murder by a noise in the yard as of some persons quarrelling. He looked out of the window, and at that moment saw Mrs Cervo raise her arm and strike Lombardo twice with something on his breast. The latter clapped his hand to the spot, gave a cry and ran out of the yard in the direction of the place where he was found lying dead. Sausa. on cross-examination, said he could not tell what the woman struck Lombardo with. Pasqualo Cavallo testifled that Mrs. Cervo midnight on Oct. 31 and secretly asked him to ind her husband. Pasquale found her husband. Michael Cervo, in a saloon, and when his wife saw him she said: "I had trouble with Frank Lounbardo and stabled him twice." Cervo inquired. "Did you kill him?" and the woman replied. "No: he ran away." Michael Corvo then said. "I told you to kill him and I wish you had." A severe cross-examination did not materially shake this testimony.

Frank Favo testilled that he saw Mrs. Cervo hurrying, after the crime, with a shawl closely wrapped around her head, in the direction of Madalene Bugelo's house, where she sent for her husband, and also gave to Madalene the diagger or knife with which the murder was committed. Madalene testiled to getting the knife from Mrs. Cervo, who asked her to hide it and not show it to anybedy, as she (Mrs. Cervo) was afraid she would be arrested if it was found in her possession. Madalene afterward, becoming alarmed by the police search for the weapon, gave it to tius Bugelo, her brother-in-law, on Nov. 2, and he threw it in the Elizabeth River. It had blood stains on the blade. find her husband. Pasquale found her hus-

Mrs. Montgomery Accused of Arson

Mrs. Ella Montgomery, a young widow, of 344 East Thirty-sixth street, was held for axamination by Justice Hogan in the Yorkville Court yesterday, charged by Fire Marshal Mitchell with attempting to burn on Dec. 28 the flat at 237 East Thirty-eighth street, where she lived at that time. There was a fire in Mrs. Montgomery's rooms, and when it was Mrs. Montgomery's rooms, and when it was extinguished rags soaked in kerosene were found in the apartment. But little furniture was in the rooms, and the widow told Mitchell that she had no insurance. Since then he has discovered, he says, that there was a heavy insurance on the furniture. Mrs. Montgomery protests her innocence. Diedrich Stolle and Henry Meyer, suspected at one time by Mitchell of being accomplices, were discharged at his request.

Joseph Lecinir, aged 42 years, of 164 Adams street, Brooklyn, was arrested last night, and locked up in the Adams street police station on complaint of his brother, Casswell Leclair of 151 Lawrence street. The latter says his brother called at his house, and drawing a re-volver, threatened to shoot him unless he sup-ported him. The brothers are active members of the Fourth Ward Republican Association.
